SONG.—THE DAYS OF MY CHILDHOOD.

Tune—The Garland of Love.

[The scene in the following Stanzas is at the celebrated Rock Springs, in Lancaster county, near the borders of Maryland, and two or three miles from the river Susquehanna, where the author was on a visit in September last. The stream or rapple is at the foot of an high woody hill, which is so beset with underwood that it was with some difficulty he penetrated a short distance along.]

While lonely and pensive, I roam in this wild-wood,
And sit by the side of its murmuring stream,
Fond mem'ry will dwell on the days of my childhood
When joy and delight, and affection were sheen.

How free from emotions the heart that will brood not,
O'er years when each moment was happy and gay,
Yet cheerless the bosom where pleasures intrude not,
To lighten each sorrow as time flies away.

But where is the being so gay that will dwell not,
With pleasing delight o'er his infantile years;
So grateful the feelings, what bosom will swell not,
When memory traces each scene it reveres.

Tho' lonely and pensive I roam in this wild-wood,
And sit by the side of its murmuring stream,
Yet mem'ry will dwell on the days of my childhood,
When joy and delight, and affection were sheen

To "Alberto," and "Orville,"

ON THEIR DEROGATION OF THE WINE-CUP.

Withhold from "me the wine-cup—no!"
For pleasure ever dwelleth there;
It is the balm of ev'ry woe,
'Tis that alone dispels Despair!
"Yes! true," most true, "the cup is bound"
"With many a beauteous," glorious "wreath,"
And O! "its hours, by votaries crown'd,"
Shall smile when in the arms of Death.

Withhold from "me the wine-cup—no!"
For hopeful bliss dwells ever there,
To raise the soul from scenes below,
And fix her, high above Despair!
"The goblet's joys are lightning's flash,
Bright beaming from the" azure "skies,"
And "soon is heard the thunder's crash,"
But lo! the body only dies!

Withhold from "me the wine-cup—no,"
With Joy and Happiness 'tis crown'd,
With scenes of bliss 'twill ever flow,
And Pleasure ever sparkle round.
"The purple bowl is" ever "bright,"
"And o'er our minds can" ever "waft!"
"A thousand scenes of gay delight,"
Where DEATH—shall ne'er inhale the draught.

BLOCKLEY BARD.

February 19, 1822.

Solution of the Enigma in last Saturday's paper.

Ah me! this world is wretched grown,
By means of those who lie alone— !
Reich Bachelor—it is no joke—
Disdains the matrimonial yoke:
Fortune may favour, beauty smile,
Even opulence may plead the while;
Least to all sense, he turns aside—
Love never can the wretch abide.
Oh! lovely maiden haste thy flight,
With scorn this selfish race requite.

G.

OR,

Before the world was populated,
Eternal Deity proclaim'd,
Death's power to last—Man be created?
Frail in his nature—Adam nam'd;
Eve to him by God was given,
Lovely, blooming, as the rose;
Left in the heavenly vale of Eden,
As condition the scripture shows,
Which breaking—the Enigma clos'd.

LOVE AT THE JOCKEY CLUB BALL.

METHINKS, said Love, as I went to the Race,
I'll go to the Ball, where each shining Grace,
Like a band of Sylphs, in their mystic round,
Will lightly dance to the music's sound.

I'll wear me a sash of the violet's hue,
As bright as a bare-bell, bath'd in dew,
And I'll go as a harper, and get from P.
His tuneful lyre of minstrelsy.

And I'll sweep its melodious silver string,
That rival beauty and youth may bring,
A chaplet of bays for his brow, that he
May remember them, when he thinks of me.

Said Love—and away he flew,
To P's harp, full well he knew,
That the Muses had destin'd his hand to bear
Their favored bard, a gift so fair.

SERENADE.

"Love wakes and weeps,
While Beauty sleeps!
O for Music's softest numbers,
To prompt a theme,
For Beauty's dream,
Soft as the pillow of her slumbers.

"Through groves of palm,
Sigh gales of balm,
Fire-flies on the air are wheeling,
While through the gloom
Comes soft perfume,
The distant beds of flowers revealing.

"O wake and live,
No dream can give,
A shadow'd bliss, the real excelling;
No longer sleep,
From lattice peep,
And list the tale that Love is telling."

Moral and Religious.

There is no virtue more acceptable to God, and in practice, more conducive to human happiness, than resignation to the divine will. He, who presumes to question the wisdom, the goodness, and the paternal solicitude for the felicity of man, of the SUPREME BEING, is worthy of the most severe punishment. That wisdom, which is displayed in the economy of the vast system of creation—that goodness, which every page in the volume of nature exhibits in language the most forcible and endearing—that paternal solicitude which the scheme of redemption and pardon so gloriously illustrates, should silence every murmur when we are chastised for the most benevolent purposes, and corrected that we may be more worthy of those unfading joys for which we are ultimately designed. This globe was not constructed for the eternal abode of an immortal soul. We should view all its comforts and all its perplexities as equally short-lived and transitory. He who uses the good things of this world without abusing them; whom prosperity cannot elate; who puts a just value upon what he possesses, and is already to resign the blessing which he is favoured with, into the hands of him by whom they were bestowed, when the requisition is made, is an object of divine complacency, and will surely receive an abundant reward. Resignation can alleviate the distresses of this life, calm its varied troubles, pour a ray of comfort to enliven the vale of tears through which our pilgrimage must be made, and cheer, with consoling expectations, the gloom that lowers over the pillow of death. Who then would have the hardiness to doubt the justice of the dispensations of Providence, or arraign Omniscience at the tribunal of human presumption.

EXTRACTS.

"The zeal of many persons is fiery, because their temper is so; and their charity is cold because it is an expensive propensity to keep warm."

"People are apt to bring themselves to believe, that their sympathy with the suffering is an atonement for their not relieving it. They endeavour to pacify their conscience by their regrets."

"The time which is redeemed from what is wrong is of little value, if not dedicated to what is right, and it is not enough that the doctrines of the Gospel furnish a subject for discourse, if they do not furnish a principle of action."

"We do not say that all the actions even of a religious man, will exemplify the purity of his profession, and illustrate the sublimity of his conceptions. Something must be conceded to the weakness of humanity, to the force of conflicting passions, to the remains of inbred corruption, to momentary forgetfulness of the awful presence of God, to occasional deviations from the narrow path, which though it is always the path of safety, is often that of suffering. But the blighted or unsound fruit which may sometimes be found even on the stoutest and most vigorous tree, bears but a small proportion to that which is healthy as the stock from which it springs, which adorns its parent stem with the beauty of its hues, and enriches them with the deliciousness of its flavour."

"Those who have resources within themselves, who can dare to live alone, want friends the least, but at the same time know how to prize them the most. But no company is far preferable to bad, because we are more apt to catch the vices of others than their virtues, as disease is far more contagious than health."

COQUETRY stands next to the want of chastity in the scale of female vices—it is in fact, a kind of mental prostitution—it is ruinous to all that delicacy of feeling which gives added lustre to female charms—it is almost destructive to modesty itself. A woman who has been addicted to its practice may strive long, and in vain to regain that singleness of heart which can bind her up so closely in her husband and children as to make her a good wife, or a good mother; and if it should have degenerated into habit, it may lead to the awful result of infidelity to her marriage vows. It is in vain for a coquette to pretend to religion—its practice involves hypocricy, falsehood and deception—every thing that is mean—every thing that is debasing—in short, as it is bottomed on selfishness and pride, where it has once possessed the mind, it will only yield to the truth-displaying banners of the Cross—this, and this only, can remove the evil; for without it, she whom the charms of youth and beauty have enabled to act the coquette, will descend into the vale of life altered, it is true, but not amended—as she will find the whole world with its allurements cling around her parting years a vain regret for days that are flown and mercenary views for her descendants.

THE RAID OF CILLECHRIST.

Bordering clans like surrounding nations, were never upon terms of hereditary concord; vicinity produces war: for this reason the Mac Donells and the Mac Kenzies were never long without some act of hostility or feud; firing houses, driving herds, raising rents, and slaughtering each other's clansmen, were feats of recreation which each was equally willing to exercise upon his neighbour; and if either was more deficient than the other, it was more from want of opportunity, than lack of good will. Among all the exploits which were thus occasioned between the two clans none was more celebrated, nor more fearful than the burning of the Cillechrist (Christ's Church;) it gave occasion and name to the pibroch of the Glengarrie family and was provoked and performed in the following manner.

In the course of a long succession of fierce and sanguinary conflicts, of the Mac Lelans, a race who were followers of the Mac Kenzies, took occasion to intercept, and assassinate the eldest son of Donald Mac Angus of Glengarrie. Donald died shortly after, and his second son, who succeeded to the chieftancy of the clan, was too young to undertake the conduct of any enterprise to revenge the death of his brother: his cousin, however, Angus Mac Raonuill of Lundi, acted as his captain, and gathering the Mac Donells, in two separate raids swept off the rents from the greater part of Lord Seaforth's country. Still, this revenge seemed to him too poor an expiation for the blood of his chief: the warm life of the best of his foemen was the only sacrifice which he thought he could offer as an acceptable oblation to appease the manes of the murdered; and he, therefore, projected a third expedition, resolving in this to fill the measure of vengeance to the brim. In the prosecution of his design he awaited a favourable opportunity, and gathering a small band of men, penetrated into the country of the Mac Kenzies, early on a Sunday morning, and surrounded the Cillechrist, while a numerous congregation were assembled within its walls. Inexorable in his purposes, Angus commanded his men to set fire to the building, and slaughter all who endeavored to break forth. Struck with despair when the flames rushed in upon the aisle of the church, and they beheld the circle of bare claymores glancing beyond the door, the congregation, scarce knowing what they did, endeavored to force their way through the weapons and the flames; but, pent within the narrow pass of a single arch, they were not capable to make way over each other, far less to break the ring of broadswords which bristled round the porch—men women, and children, were driven back into the blazing pile or hewn down, and transfixed at the gorge of the entrance: the flames increased on every side, a heavy column of livid smoke rolled upwards on the air, and the roar of infuriated men, the wailing of suffering infants, and the shrieks of despairing women, rung from within the dissolving pile. While the church was burning, the piper of the Mac Donells marched round the building, playing as was customary on extraordinary occasions, an extempore piece of music: the pibroch which he now played was called, from the place where it was composed, Cillechrist, and afterwards became the pibroch of the Glengarrie family. At length the flames poured forth from every quarter of the building, the roof fell in, there was one mingled yell, one crash of ruin; the flame sunk in smouldering vapour, and all was silent. Angus had looked on with stern unrelenting determination, but the deed was done, and recollection now warned him of the danger of delay;—he immediately gave orders to retreat, and leading off his men, set off with the utmost expedition for his own country. The flames of the church had, however, lighted a beacon of alarm which blazed far and wide: the Mac Kenzies had gathered in numerous bodies, and took the chase with such vigor, that they came in sight of the Mac Donells long before they got to the border of their country. Angus Mac Raonuill seeing the determination of the pursuit and the superiority of its numbers, ordered his men to separate, and shift each for himself; they dispersed accordingly, and made every one his way to his own home as well as he could. The commander of the Mac Kenzies did not scatter his people, but, intent on securing the leader of his foemen, held them together on the track of Angus Mac Raonuill, who with a few of his men in his company fled towards Loch Ness. Angus always wore a scarlet plush jacket, and it now served to mark him out to the knowledge of the pursuers. Perceiving that the whole chase was drawn after himself, he separated his followers one by one, till at length he was left alone; but yet the pursuers turned not aside upon the track of any other. When they came near the burn of Alt Shian, the leader of the Mac Kenzies had gained so much on the object of his pursuit, that he had nearly overtaken him. The river which was before them runs in this place through a rocky chasm, or trough of immense depth, and considerable breadth: Angus knew that death was behind him, and gathering all his strength, he dashed at the desperate leap, and being a man of singular vigour and activity, succeeded in clearing it. The leader of the Mac Kenzies, reckless of danger in the ardour of the pursuit, followed also at the leap, but less athletic than his adversary, he failed of its length, and slipping on the side of the crag, held by the slender branch of a birch tree which grew above him on the brink. The Mac Donell, looking back in his flight to see the success of his pursuer, beheld him hanging to the tree, and struggling to gain the edge of the bank; he turned, and drawing his dirk, at one stroke severed the branch which supported the Mac Kenzie:—"I have left much behind me with you to day, (said he,) take that also." The wretched man, rolling from rock to rock, fell headlong into the stream below, where shattered and mangled by the fall, he expired in the water. Angus Mac Raonuill continued his flight, and the Mac Kenzies, though bereft of their leader, held on the pursuit. Checked, however, by the stream which none of them dared to leap, Angus was gaining fast upon them, when a musquet discharged at him by one of the pursuers, wounded him severely, and greatly retarded his speed. After passing the river, the Mac Kenzies again drew hard after him, and as they came in sight of Loch Ness, Angus perceiving his strength to fail with his wound, and his enemies pressing upon him, determined to attempt swimming the loch: he rushed into the water, and for some time, refreshed by its coolness, swam with much vigour and confidence. His limbs would, however, in all probability have failed him before he had crossed the half of the distance to the opposite bank; but Fraser of Fyars, a particular friend of the Glengarrie family, seeing a single man pursued by a party out of the Mac Kenzies country, and knowing that the Mac Donells had gone upon an expedition in that direction, got out a boat, and hastening to the aid of Angus, took him on board and conveyed him in safety to the east side of the loch. The Mac Kenzies, seeing their foeman had escaped, discontinued the pursuit, and Angus returned at his leisure to Glengarrie.

SELECTIONS FROM LATE ENGLISH PAPERS.

A suit was lately brought in the British court of King's Bench, against an attorney of the name of Frowd, for having charged the plaintiff with the crime of conspiracy.—It appeared that the plaintiff had endeavored to obtain redress for the seduction of a respectable young woman, by the Duke of San Carlos, Spanish Ambassador. Frowd, the latter's attorney, to get rid of the plaintiff's importunities, had preferred a bill of indictment for conspiracy against him. The present suit was brought to bring the thing to issue, as Frowd was endeavoring to procrastinate the trial. The plaintiff was nonsuited by having made use of a g instead of a j in the name of Carvajal, which was the name assumed by the Duke to carry on his designs upon the young woman.

A natural phenomenon of rare occurrence in this climate, and attended by very singular circumstances, was recently observed at Mondesley, in Norfolk. During the sale of some wreck upon the beach, the attention of a person was drawn towards what he conceived to be a ship on fire, about a mile from the shore. He immediately pointed it out, but it was accounted for by the supposition that the appearance of smoke arose from the steam vessel passing from the north. An old Captain, however, decided that the rising column was a water spout. As they watched this interesting spectacle, on a sudden three new bathing machines, laid up for the winter in an opening in the cliff, through which a steam that turns a mill takes its course, were hurried into the air with inconceivable rapidity. Two of them took their direction towards a house over which they were forced by the hurricane, breaking in the roof and falling on the other side they were dashed to atoms. The third passed over the mill, which was also destroyed by its fall.

The Invisible Highwayman.—The following circumstances, the truth of which we have from the most indubitable authority, occurred on Thursday last. On that evening, Mr. Alexandre, whose powers of vocal illusion we noticed before, was engaged to display his abilities before a distinguished company of gentlemen, among whom was Earl Grosvenor, at the residence of George Wilbraham, Esq. of Delaware Lodge.—For this purpose, about dark, he took a chaise from the Royal Hotel, and proceeded on his way. Finding that the post boy did not make all the speed his appointment required, Mr. Alexandre had recourse to his curious art to quicken him on his way; and imitating the noise of the approach of horses, and throwing his voice first on one side of the road and then on the other, called out, "Coachman stop!" repeating the word several times. "I won't stop," replied the young man, casting his eyes on all sides, without seeing any body. The call being reiterated again and again, he unmercifully belaboured his horses in hopes of outgoing his supposed pursuers. The voice now proceeded from behind, anon as from under the carriage. At length the poor post boy descended from his station, and taking one of the lamps from its socket, he ventured to examine all around, and under the chaise, without covering any visible appearance, which increase his astonishment the voice articulating the same summons, seemed to proceed from the roof. Petrified with fear and wonder, the affrighted post boy remounted his vehicle, drove off with increased speed, and leaning to the window of the chaise, cautioned Mr. Alexandre not to make a noise, as they were certainly pursued by highwaymen. On reaching the toll gate immediately on entering the forest, the young man communicated his apprehensions to the person whom he charged to notice the man on horseback, whom he supposed to be behind, as they passed.

Mr. Alexandre still, however, continued the joke, placing his voice sometimes at a further and sometimes at a nearer distance, while the affrighted driver was almost in a state of distraction; till turning from the Norwich turnpike to the road which leads to Delamere Lodge he thought himself more secure, and began to encourage his fear that they were then out of danger. But alas! the shout of "Coachman, stop! stop! we are still here," awakened and increased all his horror. Arriving at the gate leading immediately to the lodge, he made a shift to dismount and open it, and having passed it, he had greater reason than ever to suppose the robbers would not dare to follow, yet still the cry of "coachman, stop!" saluted his ears. His fortitude finally forsook him; his limbs shook; he declared that the devil was certainly about them; and begged Mr. Alexandre would not return that night to Chester, as he durst not drive him. Mr. Alexandre related the adventure to his company on reaching the lodge, to their no small amusement. It was impossible to pacify the post boy, or persuade him of the hoax that had been practised upon him, until he was permitted to witness his performance, and then indeed, having demonstration of Mr. A's capabilities, he concluded to bring him home the same night.

Important Caution.—It has been stated in several papers, that Dr. Urwins recommends the Prussic Acid, (Acydum Hydrocyanicum,) as a cure for the tooth ache.—The method of application ought at the same time to have been also specified, as the Prussic acid is the deadliest and most powerful poison known, and we deem it necessary to caution our readers as to its use: in a concentrated state a single drop applied to the tongue would kill the strongest man in two minutes, and a few drops rubbed on the skin even, would prove fatal in the same period. Even in a diluted state of six or ten drops to three or four ounces of water, it ought to be used with the utmost caution, and, for the tooth ache or any other malady, never without the advice and assistance of a skilful medical practitioner.

New Chemical Apparatus.—An apparatus has been invented at Glasgow, for the manufacture of any mineral water required, to be charged with carbonic acid gas, which amounts, in fact, to the development of a power hitherto unknown, but equal to that of steam. This machine is described as having neither gasometer or air-pump, the strength of a boy is asserted to be capable of compressing into any vessel thirty or forty atmospheres of gas in minutes; while to effect the same by forcing-pump, would occupy the strength of several men as many hours. A machine equal in force to an engine of horse power, and requiring neither fire nor water, would not occupy a space of more than four feet square. For many purposes it would be more applicable than steam, but by reason of the present price of phuric acid, greatly more expensive.

ONTWA.

A little poem has lately been published in New York, entitled ONTWA, which we have read with much interest. The story turns on the fate of a tribe of Indians who formerly resided on the shores of Lake Erie, and who, nearly two hundred years ago; were totally exterminated by the Iroquois. As conveying a lively and faithful picture of Indian customs, habits, and pursuits, this poem seems to possess much merit. The author tells us, in the language which Chateaubriand applied to La, that "it was written in the deserts, under the huts of the savages." There are some beautiful descriptions of scenery, and is not without [illegible] in the truest spirit [illegible] of incidents is [illegible] evidently to be [illegible] tu e of the subject [illegible] tion in the port[illegible]

THE CELEBRATED

CEYLON TOOTH POWDER.

THE recipe for this excellent Dentifrice was sent by a gentleman in the East Indies to his friend in England, where it is universally used and highly approved, being a preventative of the TOOTH-ACHE. It purifies and sweetens the Breath, causes the Teeth to be a beautiful white; improves the enamel and strengthens the Gums. Very few have been known to have the Tooth-ache, or Rheumatism in the Gums, who have constantly used it. For sale by THOMAS S. ANNERS, Sole Agent for the proprietor, No. 141 Chesnut street.

A liberal discount made to those who buy to sell again. Also a choice assortment of PERFUMERY.

"THE ARCHITECTURAL INSTITUTE OF PHILADELPHIA."

Hearing that a number of young men have recently associated under this title, for the purpose of promoting a more general knowledge of the principles of Architecture; and, deeming their object meritorious, I am induced to address them in the language of encouragement. It must be admitted, that industry, and a proper employment of time, should claim the attention of all; for unless there is sufficient activity to bring into operation, the genius and abilities bestowed upon mankind, they can avail nothing. Society has a powerful influence in the human breast, to aid this active principle; it is here the mind feels the necessity, and appreciates the value of knowledge; therefore, it is reasonable to anticipate much benefit from such a union—a union honourable to you as men, and valuable as artisans; it will perfect you in that very employment from which you have your support, and give you advantages that will make it easy and satisfactory to you.

Your native city has already been styled "The Athens of America"—may we not hope, that her fame will increase, and that ages yet unborn will gaze with wonder and applause, on the beauty and magnificence of her accumulating structures.

POSTSCRIPT.

Monday Night, 11 o'clock. Ten minutes ago, Mr. PINKNEY breathed his last.—After a course of the most acute suffering, he expired without a groan. Thus has departed, at an age when he might have rationally looked forward to many years yet of activity and usefulness, the Patriot, the Statesman, the transcendant Advocate, and one who may be ranked among the extraordinary men that have shed a lustre on their country, and adorned the world. He was taken suddenly ill, a week ago, in the night succeeding great exertions in arguing a cause in the Supreme Court.

Upon the announcement of the death of Mr. PINKNEY, in the House of Representatives in Congress, Mr. Randolph—who never stood second in point of eloquence to any other man than him whom he has so eloquently eulogized—offered the following powerful, feeling and effective remarks:

I rise to announce to the House, the not un-looked for death of a man who filled the first place in the public estimation, in the first profession in that estimation, in this or in any other country. We have been talking of General Jackson, and a greater than him is, not here, but gone forever! I allude, Sir, to the boast of Maryland, and the pride of the United States—the pride of all of us—but particularly the pride and ornament of the profession of which you, Mr. Speaker, are a member, and an eminent one. He was a man with whom I lived, when a member of this House, and a new one too—and ever since he left it for the other—I speak it with pride—in habits not merely negatively friendly, but of kindness and cordiality. The last time that I saw him was on Saturday—the last Saturday but one—in the pride of life, and full possession of all his faculties, in that lobby. He is now gone to his account, (for as the tree falls, so it must lie,) where we must all go, and by the same road too, the course of nature—and where all of us, put off the evil day as long as we may, must also soon go. For what is the past but as a span, and which of us can look forward to as many years as we have lived? The last act of intercourse between us was an act, the recollection of which I would not be without, for all the offices that all the men of the United States have filled, or ever shall fill. He had indeed his faults—foibles, I should rather say; and, Sir, who is without them? Let such, and such only, cast the first stone. And these foibles, faults if you will, which every body could see, because every body is clear sighted in regard to the faults and foibles of others—he, I have no doubt, would have been the first to acknowledge, on a proper representation of them. Every thing now is hidden to us—not, God forbid! that utter darkness rests upon the grave, which hideous as it is, is lighted, cheered and warmed by fire from Heaven—not the impious fire fabled to be stolen from Heaven by the heathen, but by the spirit of the living God, whom we all profess to worship, and whom I hope we shall spend the remainder of this day in worshipping, not with mouth-honour, but in our hearts; in spirit and in truth—that it may not be said of us, also, "This people draweth nigh unto me with their lips, but their heart is far from me." Yes it is just so. He is gone. I will not say that our loss is irreparable; because such a man as has existed may exist again. There has been a Homer; there has been a Shakspeare; there has bee a Milton; there has been a Newton. There may then be another PINKNEY; but there is now none. And it was to announce this event I have risen. I am, said Mr. R. almost inclined to believe in presentiments. I have been all along as well assured of the fatal termination of that disease with which he was affected, as I am now. And I have dragged my weary limbs before sunrise to the door of his sick chamber, (for I would not intrude upon the sacred sorrows of his family,) almost every morning since his illness. From the first I had almost no hope. I move you, sir, that this House do now adjourn.

[When Mr. R. concluded, the question was taken on adjournment, and carried, nem. con.]

ACCIDENT.—On Thursday week, while the Mail Stage was passing over the bridge at Durham, (Mass.) it gave way, and precipitated the stage, horses and driver, together with three passengers, into the river. Two of the passengers perished—the two leading horses were saved.—The stage was more to pieces. The Mail Bag was in the water two hours. The distance from the bridge to the water is about 15 feet.

From the Salem Register of Feb. 21.

An examination of an extraordinary nature took place at the Court House in this town, on Tuesday last, before Justice Tucker. Five persons of the Quaker denomination, belonging to Lynn, were arraigned before the Justice, charged with riotous and disorderly conduct on the preceding Sabbath, at the Quaker House of worship, in Lynn. It appeared, that some of the persons thus charged, had, in consequence of circumstances connected with a schism, which, we regret to learn, has for some time prevailed among the Friends, (with the nature of which we are not fully acquainted) been read out, or dismissed from the Society; that notwithstanding this, they continued to attend the meeting, and to take the seats appropriated for the elders and speakers, contrary to the regulations of the Society. On the last Sabbath three or four of them entered the high seats, were ordered to leave them, and on their refusing, were actually taken by force and carried out of the House. It also appeared, that one of the persons charged, an elderly, sedate and respectable looking quaker, actually entered the House of worship with a sword hanging at his side! He also was put out of the house, but did not attempt to make use of this deadly weapon. These are some of the principal facts of the case, and it would be improper to say more till their trial takes place, next month, before the Court of Common Pleas at Ipswich, for their appearance at which, they were ordered to enter into recognizance. The defendants, declining to give bonds, have all been committed to the jail in this town, to await their trial.

FROM THE SPANISH MAINE.

The schr. M'Donough, Capt. Augur, arrived in 15 days from Curracoa, brings papers to 10th of February:

Accounts from Porto Cavello, state that La Torre had returned there with about 50 cavalry, as an escort, having left at Tocuyo from 1000 to 1200 men, which he intended immediately to reinforce with a part of the garrison of Porto Cavello, and with the whole, endeavor to penetrate into the interior, and make a diversion in favor of the Spanish cause.

The Spanish brig of war Hercules, and armed schr. Morillo, were off Curacoa, 7th inst. and sailed to the windward.

Letters from La Guayra, of the 14th of Jan. received there state, that the object of the British sloop of war Falmouth, calling at Puerto Cabello, was to notify the commandant that the British admiral would not admit of any port on the main, in the possession of the Columbians, being considered in a state of blockade, unless there were two men of war stationed off such port to enforce the same; and Spanish privateers capturing any English vessels in violation of this notice, would be declared pirates, and dealt with accordingly.

A letter from La Guayra, dated the 30th of Jan. says—"A French man of war schr. arrived here on the 28th, having an envoy on board for the purpose of making some commercial arrangements with this government, and to intimate that the Columbian flag will be admitted into all the ports of France, and her colonies. A salute was fired from the schr. on coming to anchor, which was returned by the batteries." The above intelligence will require confirmation.

CURACOA, Feb. 9.

The two Spanish vessels which were lately cut out of Carraccas Bay, have contrary to expectation been sold at Laguira.

Business is very dull, both at Carraccas and Laguira. At the former place the government has ordered the male population, from 10 to 50 years of age, to take up arms in defence of the country.

NORFOLK, Feb. 22.

Arrival of the Hornet.—Anchored in Hampton Roads yesterday morning about 7 o'clock, the United States' ship Hornet, Robert Henley, Esq. commander, from Pensacola, and last from Havanna, eleven days from the latter—Sailed from Havanna in company with 22 sail of vessels under convoy, twenty of which were American and two foreign, bound to different ports of the United States. They parted company with the Hornet at different times, after getting clear of the coast of Cuba.—Gen. Bernard, Col. Tottin, Capt. Pouissin, and Lieut. Tuttle, of the Engineer Corps, and Capt. Jesse D. Elliot, of the U. States Navy, passengers in the Hornet, came up to town last night, in the Steam Boat Hampton.

Captain H. states that Havanna was in a complete state of anarchy, the people being divided into several parties, and the nominal governor perfectly subservient to the popular whim; that piracy and pirates were openly countenanced and abetted, and their depredations on American commerce spoken of as a matter of congratulation. The officers of the Hornet were treated with civility, however.

The slave trade was carried on with great activity among the Islands.

We sincerely hope that government will send immediately into these seas such a force as will change the tone of these miscreants. A better field for the enterprize of our young officers cannot well be imagined.

Chester, (Pa.) Feb. 26.—Great damage has been occasioned in this and some of the adjoining counties, by the late freshet. Chester Creek rose to an unusual height, and the injury caused thereby is immense. On Friday morning, the Bridge which was situated over the Schuylkill, at Gray's ferry, was observed floating down the Delaware, opposite this borough, with two men upon it.

ROBBERIES.—We are informed that the store of Mrs Eliza Wright, in Ridley Delaware county, was broken open and robbed of several articles of goods, by two or three desperadoes, on Saturday night, the 16th inst. On the same night, the house of the Rev. Dr. Bartine, in Darby, was also robbed. [Post Boy.

SINGULAR CASE.

Some time in September last, a daughter of sheriff Walton, of Cooperstown, (N. Y.) aged eight or nine years, while amusing herself with a piece of tin, an inch and a quarter in diameter, by actual admeasurement, got it into her throat—a surgeon was immediately called, who, finding extraction inconvenient, pushed it into her throat, where it remained until two weeks since, at times causing severe pain and extreme difficulty of respiration, when by an effort almost destructive of life, the child protruded it into her throat, and with her own fingers extracted it. Strange as it may seem, although laying in the stomach five months there was no corrosion visible, and the only difference in the appearance of the tin from its pristine state, was a partial discoloration.

MIRROR OF LIFE,

TO SHEW THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIMES, ITS FORM AND PRESSURE.

The Schuylkill Falls Bridge drifted down the Schuylkill into the Delaware, and has been found twenty-five miles below the city.

Peale's "Court of Death" was exhibited for two days at Charleston, S. C. for the benefit of the Philadelphia Orphan Asylum, and produced 101 dollars 50 cents in aid of the charity.

In an affray on Monday night, in Southwark, two Sailors were so severely stabbed by some Spaniards, that one of them has since died. Four of the culprits are now in custody.

Thomas B. Dorsey has been appointed Attorney General of the state of Maryland, vice Luther Martin.

The Legislature of Massachusetts has postponed indefinitely the bill for the incorporation of the city of Boston.

The Senate of New-York have passed the Fulton Bank Bill, in committee of the whole. They have required a bonus of $30,000, to be appropriated to the Canal Fund.

It is stated in the Columbia Telescope, that some disturbances have taken place in the South Carolina College; in consequence, more than two-thirds of the Junior Class were suspended until the meeting of the trustees in April next.

Six or seven seamen, who had long been in confinement at Richmond, on a charge of piracy, have recently been discharged by order of the President of the United States.

A man named John Wadleigh was lately killed at Exeter. N. H. He was supposed to have been murdered by a fellow called John Bickford, who was pursued and arrested.

There were great rejoicings at Carthagena on the 9th of July, on account of the capture of Panama and Porto Bello. On this occasion the troops marched in procession to the tune of "HAIL COLUMBIA."

Mary, a child of Col. Cyrus Bosworth, of Warren, (Ohio,) was burnt to death about a month since, in consequence of her clothes taking fire.

A Mr. Guy Harris, of Jefferson county, (N. Y.) returning from Albany where he had been with a load, was attacked on Sunday night of last week, about four miles of Schenectady, by four negroes, and severely bruised. They are now in gaol.

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE.—The dwelling house of Mr John Litchfield, in Scituate, (Mass.) was consumed by fire early on Sunday morning, the 17th ult. and awful to relate, Mr Litchfield and wife, (the former 70 years of age and the latter 88,) perished in the conflagration. Mrs. Powers, who lived with this aged couple, in the capacity of house-keeper, had a narrow escape from the flames.

Dr. Hall, of Lebanon, in attempting to cross the bridge at Hudson, on horse back, while it was overflowed by the late freshet, was swept off and drowned.

The ship Pacific, Capt. Moore, has arrived at Calcutta via Madras, in four months from Philadelphia, all well.

There is something mysterious about the fire of General Van Rensselaer's house, near Albany. The damage, after all, is but a few hundred dollars. Contradictory rumours are afloat; no persons arrested or suspected of the act.—N. Y. Nat. Adv.

U. S. SHIP FRANKLIN.

We learn by the ship Hope, from Monte Video, arrived at New-York, that the U. S. ship Franklin, Com. Stewart, and schr. Dolphin, Capt. Conner, arrived at Rio de Janeiro the latter end of November, all well.

Shortly after coming to anchor, capt. Stewart during the heavy rain, went on shore, and paid his respects to the public authorities, and the next day there was an interchange of salutes.—It was not known when the Franklin would proceed round Cape Horn.

There was no political news at Montevideo, and the last accounts from Lima (to September 21) represented all as quiet in that quarter.

Captain Bratt from Matanzas, informs, that a few days before he left, a piratical schr. of 30 or 40 tons, two brass pieces, and 15 men, had been surprised and captured three leagues to leeward of that place by troops dispatched for the purpose; the captain and three men killed, and four taken prisoners. She was known to belong to Havana. The pirates were very numerous in the neighborhood of Matanzas, and almost every vessel that arrived or sailed was robbed, and the crew and passengers beaten.

FIRES.—On Sunday last, a small building belonging to James W. Carpenter, at Goshen, was destroyed by fire.

On the 9th inst. the dwelling house of widow Hicks, of Galway, Saratoga county, was burnt, together with the principal part of the furniture.

The wire manufactory at Lee, (Mass) owned by Thatcher & Bassit, was burnt down on Tuesday last week. Loss estimated at $3000.

On the 12th inst. the house of Mr. Nathan Spooner, at Brutus, was destroyed by fire, together with all their furniture, provisions, &c. but what is still more distressing, Mr. Spooner lost two of his children, boys, one four the other six years of age. The parents had put the little boys to bed, and taken their youngest child with them, to visit a neighbor a short distance, and returned only to see their dwelling in flames, and learn the fate of their children. [New-York Commercial Advertiser.

FROM HAVAKA.

A private letter, dated 9th Feb. on which reliance may be placed, says—"The authorities here have just come to the determination of making this a place of deposit." Hitherto the produce of other countries, when once entered at Havana, was compelled to pay the duties, but under the present regulation, if carried into full effect, the already great trade of Havana, will be much increased; and the Island of Jamaica, the Bahamas, &c. will henceforth probably receive their principal supplies through that medium.

MR. PINKNEY.

Eulogium is often mistaken for false praise—animated descriptions of men's virtues, for uncandid commendations—and favourable biography for a tribute, flowing from an effervescence of friendly feeling: But when, by the dispensation of Providence, a MAN is taken from among us, whose countrymen have been taught for years, and commanded by the force of his great forensic genius, to look at with astonishment, and to offer to him the whole homage of their admiration, we need present no apology for occupying any part of our columns with extracts from the honourable commendations uttered in the houses of Congress upon the talents, the great worth, and the diplomatic skill of WILLIAM PINKNEY. Our regrets for his demise we know full well are unavailing—but we cannot refrain from the utterance of them.

Extract of a letter to the Editors, dated Wilmington, (D.) Feb. 26.

"Our Legislature have incorporated a manufacturing company, to be called the Mill Seat Manufacturing Company, located on the Brandywine. The company will have a capital of $150,000. It is a small beginning, but I think it the more certain of success—The Brandywine is a stable and well watered stream for this business, and will, no doubt, at some future period be a source of wealth to this state, and perhaps to the union.

"We have had a terrible freshet in our streams—almost every bridge for many miles round this place, has been carried away by the overwhelming tide—incalculable damage has been done on the Brandywine—the southern abutment of the bridge was beaten down by the drifting timber and ice—the bridge fell and was swept against Mr. Shipley's mill, which carried away almost the whole of one side; the bridge was entirely swept away, together with a person of the name of Dutton, who was on it at the time, his body has not been found on the marshes about two miles below the town. Mr. J. Gilpin has been the greatest sufferer that we have yet heard of. We have to lament the loss of a great deal of machinery that he had employed in the process of paper making, together with his rag-house and many valuable articles that were in it. His loss he estimates at $15,000, erroneously stated in one of our public prints 4,500. Every factory on the Creek has sustained more or less damage—the mill races have been swept away in many places, and many of the flour mills stand idle for want of water. The bridge at Wilmington is the only one that stood the shock—it received but trifling injury, being protected by a bend in the Creek which caused the ice to shoot past to the shore and thereby breaking its force."

A Hog was butchered last week, by William [illegible] at Mount Ephraim, Gloucester county, N. J. [illegible], after being dressed, weighed 858 lbs. It was exposed for sale in the Jersey Market, on Monday last.

After an embargo of nearly two months, it must be a satisfaction to all classes of the community to see the Delaware again glides majestically on its course—having burst the fetters which so long held her in thraldom. The sails are set, and the breeze now bears the richly freighted vessel to her destination. Trade begins to brighten—the wharves once more resound with the noisy hum of business.

A fire of a very calamitous character, broke out on Thursday evening last, at the stores of Mr. John Carter, in Prune street, between Fourth and Fifth, at about eight or nine o'clock. The buildings were very materially injured—and the damage sustained, as we are told, was of some consequence. Of the cause we have heard nothing—but it is conjectured to have originated in design.

We understand that the police officers, have discovered a considerable quantity of [illegible] which was concealed under ground in one of the haunts of our famous Forty Thieves.

It is stated, in a letter from Harrisburg, written on Wednesday last, "that a bill to establish a LOAN OFFICE was this morning reported in the Senate of this State."

The Pensacola Floridian states, that from [illegible] 15 per cent interest is paid for money, and mentions one money lender who has this whole capital in constant requisition at 18 per cent per annum.

An efficient naval force we learn, is ordered by the Navy Department to suppress piracy near the West India Islands and the Gulph of Mexico. Five vessels having on board a detachment of marines, are ordered on this duty forthwith.

BARBER OF SEVILLE.

The active vigour and unabated avidity with which Mr. Philippe pursues his professional business, and acquits himself of his professional duties, excites and receives the admiration of the entire public. The style in which he has produced the Opera of the BARBER OF SEVILLE, reflects a lustre upon his talents, the brightness of which can never be diminished.—This opera was brought out last night with great effect; the songs, particularly those by Mr. P. were constantly encored, and the repetition of them followed by applauses, which, though we dislike extravagance, we are justified in saying were as enthusiastic as they were reiterated. The Finale to the first act of the Opera was a specimen of the great extent to which the musical art may be carried, and of the extreme beauty of its most intricate constructions. We contemplate a second gratification on Monday—In our next we shall be a little more profuse in the description of the piece.

By advertisements in the New York papers, it appears that all the property, real and personal, of the Vice President of the United States, has been assigned over for the benefit of his creditors, and the large and elegant mansion house, now occupied by him in person, on Staten Island, is offered to be rented from the 1st of April next, together with a spacious barn, stables, coach house, and other out houses, with extensive gardens, and about 300 acres of excellent land.

A bold attempt to escape was made by the criminals confined in the jail of this town on Wednesday evening last. About sundown, the turnkey, who had carried them some water, was seized by the throat by one of them, while another rummaged about for a razor to despatch him; but not succeeding, they left him helpless on the floor, opened the doors of the cells with the aid of the keys, and made a rush down the stairs; the jailor's wife, hearing the disturbance, closed the lower door, and immediately called assistance. The Sheriff soon attended, and by his resolute bearing, conquered the rebellious and murderous spirit of the ringleaders, who were compelled to march forth from the cell in which they had congregated, plotting destruction, and submit to be ironed. The turnkey, we are happy to say, is not materially injured.—There is a larger number of criminals at present in confinement than at any former period.—Prov. Pat.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 27.

A coroner's inquest was held by Lambert Thomas, Esq. on Monday last, over the body of John Cannon, in a house on Stillhouse street. He was represented to be a young man of steady habits—by trade a baker. It appears that he had formerly boarded in the house, and was in the habit of visiting there as a friendly acquaintance. On the morning of Monday he came in in his usual manner, and after sitting for some time below in conversation with the woman of the house, went up stairs as was his frequent habit, and as she supposed, to lie down. In a few minutes he put a period to his existence by placing a musket under his chin, and discharging the whole load through his throat—it passed out at the back of his neck and mangled him most shockingly.

M. Le Barren, the person that built the Pottstown bridge, has made a contract for digging two miles and three quarters of the most difficult part of the Union Canal. We understand he is to receive 15 cents for every yard in good digging, and 75 cents, in rocks. This part of the canal it is expected will amount to about $36,000. The Engineer of the Union Canal, calculates that these two miles and three quarters will cost the company about $50,000.

[Pottstown Times.

French Criminal Jurisprudence.—The following is a statement of the number of persons brought before the Courts of Justice of the Kingdom of France during five years:—

1816—Persons tried. 9890; of 3414 were condemned to death; to hard labour or confinement, 6807; and 3083 were acquitted.

1817—Persons tried, 14116; of whom 558 were condemned to death; to hard labour or confinement, 9431; and 1715 were acquitted.

1818—Persons tried, 2722; of whom 324 were sentenced to death; to hard labour or confinement, 6712; and 3010 were acquitted.

1819—Persons tried, 8202, of whom 311 were condemned to death; to hard labour or confinement, 5476; and 2726 were acquitted.

1820—Persons tried, 8011; of whom 304 were condemned to death; to hard labour or confinement, 5202; and 2809 were acquitted.

Counterfeiters.—Mr. S. H. P. Lee, of New London, has at length discovered the daring gang of 62 persons who have counterfeited his "Patent New London Bilious Pills." In uttering of base coin, or forging of notes, there are some tangible marks which may lead to detection; but Mr. Lee does not inform the public of what materials the genuine and spurious pills are composed, so that the fraud may be detected. "Rhubarb is rhubarb," quoth Dr. Ollapod; and a pill is a pill, when applied for the same purpose; therefore, we must know the "effect effective" of these counterfeit pills, before legal punishment can be inflicted. How would it answer to compel this daring gang of counterfeiters to swallow a box of the genuine pills as a punishment?

Bellows Falls, (Vert.) Feb. 25.

On Thursday last, we had a heavy shower of rain, attended with lightning as vivid, and thunder as loud, as we have ever witnessed in the month of July.

Washington, Feb. 28.

The funeral of the late William Pinkney took place yesterday, from the Capitol, agreeably to the arrangements adopted by the Committee of the Senate.

At 10 o'clock, the committee of arrangement, Pall-bearers, and Mourners, attended at Brown's Hotel, the late lodgings of the deceased, and the corpse was removed, in charge of the Committee of Arrangements, attended by the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, to the Senate Chamber. The House of Representatives entered the Chamber, preceded by its officers; the members of the Executive branch of the Government; the Judges of the Supreme Court; the Foreign Ministers, and as many citizens as could obtain admission on the floor or in the galleries, also attended, where Divine Service was performed by the Rev. Mr. Ryland, Chaplain of the Senate.

At 11 o'clock the funeral moved from the Senate Chamber to the place of interment.

The Pall Bearers were, Messrs. Lowrie, Dickerson, R. M. Johnson, James Brown, Otis, and Elliot, of the Senate.

From the province of Texas our latest accounts are, that Gen. Long, who fell by a mistake into the hands of the Republicans, supposing that he was assaulting a Royalist party has been not only released with his fifty men, but taken into the Patriot service, with pay, rank, and emoluments. So that he was not in the Patriot service before, having got there by being taken prisoner by them. The privates are to receive a dollar per day each in their new employ. They are lucky men, indeed, to escape at the same time from captivity and starvation. The reader cannot but remark when their numbers are fairly told, what exaggerated accounts have been given of the formidable force of the army of Gen. Long, at no time more respectable, in number at least, than Falstaff's famous company.

HUNTINGDON, L. I. Feb. 25.

On Thursday we had one of the greatest floods ever known here. All the Mill dams at Smithtown have been carried away, also the mill dams at Cold Spring. A house about 8 miles from here was carried 6 feet from its foundation. In a number of places on the turnpike, the water was from 4 to 6 feet deep.

CURIOSITIES.—The N. Y. Commercial Advertiser contains the advertisement of a showman, who had forty wax figures to exhibit; and the list of them indicates many singularities in the distribution of modern Fame. Among the figures of Kings, Generals and Statesmen are those of gypsies and misers, swindlers, murderers and fire-eaters, all mixed up together, with little respect for the marshal's truncheon, or the monarch's crown. Take the following for examples:

Alexander, Emperor of Russia.

Hortensia Howard, who married 17 husbands, and destroyed 16, by pouring melted lead into their ears while asleep.

Bouchier, the fortunate gamester, who won 20,000*l.* with a single loss of a shilling.

Duke of Wellington.

Madame Girardelli, the astonishing fire-eater, now performing at Paris. She puts boiling lead into her mouth, washes her hands in aquafortis, dances on red hot plates of iron, and passes red hot bars of iron over different parts of her body, without sustaining the least injury.

Louisa Morgan, who continued asleep 4 weeks and 3 days.

The renowned Baron Geramb a notorious imposter and swindler, who after remaining for a time in London, and obtaining unlimited credit, suddenly absconded with property to a large amount.

Lord Nelson.—Lady Nelson.

Lumley Kellingworth, Esq. a man noted for his cruelty to animals—it was proved that he caused two of his horses to be starved to death for some trivial fault, at which he had taken offence.

Daniel Dancer, a penurious miser, who was found dead in a sack, literally starved, although possessed of immense riches at the time.

DRAMATIC SUMMARY.

WALNUT STREET.—The Barber of Seville, a Comic opera, of great celebrity, translated from the Italian, with new music composed by BISHOP, and with additions by Mr. Philipps, was produced last night with very distinguished success.

We derived great gratification from the performance of Miss Seymour in Belinda a few nights ago, and find by the manner in which she acquitted herself last night in Rosina (Barber of Seville) that her taste for the business of opera is in a very fine state of cultivation, the result of which will evidently be productive to her.

PRUNE STREET.—The performances this evening, (a benefit night,) are Timour the Tartar, and Robinson Crusoe.

Mr. Bloxton, the husband of the lady of that name at the Walnut street theatre, made his second appearance upon any stage last evening at this Theatre. He gave very good promises of future success in this profession; and, with the necessary diligence of application may flatter himself hereafter to derive character from it. In honour of the occasion, on Monday, the 4th March, will be performed The Battle of Bunker Hill, a patriotic play which has heretofore received much approbation.

NEW-YORK.—The pageant of the Coronation of Henry the 5th, has been exhibiting at this house for several nights. It is announced to be temporarily laid aside to give place for other novelty.—Rob Roy, which seems to have been very attractive, appears to keep the stage.

Mr. West has opened his Circus, in this city, with his company of Dramatists and Equestrians.

BOSTON.—Mr. and Mrs. BARNES, for the first and only time, represented the characters of Mustapha and Morgiana in the Forty Thieves, which was got up, on Monday last, with "new and grand scenery." Mrs. Crowley's comedy of the Belles Stratagem preceded it.

HARRISBURG.—On Monday, the 25th ult. at the Walnut street Theatre, was represented the tragedy of Pizarro, and the farce of Raising the Wind. This Theatre is constructed in the building recently occupied by the Legislature.

On Thursday the Comedy of THE WILL; or a School for Daughters was exhibited. We understand the Company will shortly repair to Lancaster, where the Theatre is in readiness for them.

CINCINNATI.—This Theatre was to have been closed previous to the 17th inst. but in consequence of the arrival of Mr. TAYLOR, it was kept open one night. That gentleman performed Zanga in the Revenge, and Le Fleur in Animal Magnetism.

Mrs. DRAKE, of this house, we perceive has had a difference with the Managers, and been refused the use of the Theatre, and by advertisement, gave an entertainment in conjunction with her husband, which she called WAYS & MEANS; or an Actress's appeal to her friends.

The Louisiana Advertiser of the 9th inst. says—"We regret to learn, that the night before last, a serious accident befel Mr. Hilson, the comedian, and Mr. Graham, the manager of the Charleston Theatre. In attempting to go on board of the steam ship, they both fell from the stage which conducted to the vessel, and the leg of the former and the arm of the latter, were fractured."

PINKNEY, the famous orator, is dead;
Of whose great eloquence, it may be said,
That he had triumph'd even over Death,
Had not the cruel tyrant stopp'd his breath.

The Novelist's Library, Vol. I.

JUST published, by HICKMAN & HAZZARD, No. 121 Chesnut street, THE NOVELIST'S LIBRARY, Vol. I. containing the History of Abaddad, by Mrs. F. Sheridan, with a Biographical Preface, and embellished with a handsome frontispiece. Price to subscribers, 50 cts. per vol. sewed—to non-subscribers, 62½ cts per vol

Our friends and the public are respectfully informed, that we intend to publish, in a neat and uniform manner, two editions 32mo. and 8vo. vols. of the most popular tales, among which are, Johnson's Rasselas, Voltaire's Zadig, Almoran and Hamet, Tales of the Castle, Fairy Tales, &c. Each work to be embellished with an elegant frontispiece.

The object in printing two editions, is to offer a choice of two sizes—each will contain the same matter. Some will prefer the 32mo. on account of its being more portable, others the 8vo. for being in fewer volumes.

The above has afforded a number of us an exercise, of a nature calculated to excite emulation, which will most assuredly improve the mind. In our researches to fathom the analogies to connect the characters, we become acquainted with ideas and associations that otherwise would not have awakened the perseverance.

The solutions being specifically addressed to us, we could upon no principle remain inactive—the excitement became general, and it was agreed unanimously to commence operations, which terminated in the conclusions above. These remarks are made in expectation that your correspondent will continue to propound questions in the form of enigmas. A STUDENT.

BALM OF COLUMBIA,

the Improved vegetable Chemical discovery.

THE ladies and gentlemen of this city and elsewhere, are respectfully informed, that John Oldridge has fortunately discovered, by the power of chemistry, the grand desideratum of preventing Hair from falling off in FORTY-EIGHT HOURS. This balm will most absolutely, in the course of a short time, make the hair grow healthy and thick. J. O. is well aware that many fraudulent and impositious Oils, &c. have been imposed on the public, and therefore prejudice will be severe against his discovery, until trial shall convince his patrons that such a thing exists in nature as a certain preventative against the loss of hair. This valuable balm will cause whiskers and beards to grow rapidly. No danger need be apprehended to the human system by the application of this capillary restorative. The public may rest assured that it helps nature, and is perfectly harmless.

Prepared and sold, at $1 a pint, or 50 cents for a half pint bottle, by JOHN OLDRIDGE, No. 55½ South Front street, Philadelphia.

RECOMMENDATION.

WE, the undersigned, do hereby certify, that we have, in various cases, used the Balm of Columbia, lately discovered by John Oldridge, of Philadelphia, and have found it highly serviceable not only as a preventative against the falling off of hair, but also as a restorative. We, therefore, feel assured of its excellence, and consider it valuable and well worthy the attention of the public. In testimony whereof, we have added our respective signatures, and given it our warmest recommendation.

CARRIAGES AND GIGS.

THE SUBSCRIBER respectfully tenders his thanks for the patronage which has heretofore been bestowed upon him, and apprizes his friends and the public that his establishment has recently been improved, and augmented to an extent which enables him to supply the calls of his customers at the most immediate notice. His carriages are not only fitted up in an elegant manner, but constructed and furnished so as to be at once comfortable and commodious—his principal care having been to accommodate them to the several seasons of the year. In the selection of his coachmen he has been particularly careful, that they should be sober and skilful, and that their appearance should correspond with the equipage. Despatch, diligence and attention, will be constantly given to those who honour him with their commands. The dimensions of his stable being very extensive, he is willing to receive Horses at Livery.

He has provided his establishment with a very elegant HEARSE FOR FUNERALS, with Horses and Furniture corresponding with the Vehicle and its purpose.
